

Powers to Tackle Anti-Social Behaviour

Malicious Communication

-  It is an offence to send false or grossly offensive, indecent, obscene or menacing messages. A person found guilty of doing so is liable to imprisonment and/or a fine.
-  A person who uses a public electronic communications network in order to cause annoyance, inconvenience or needless anxiety may also be issued with a fixed penalty notice.